26th July.

The entry yesterday was left unfinished. Aausi and I saw and met a kid yesterday who did not know his name.

We got him a plate of chowmein.

It has been hard to... handle myself. I need not sway. My directorial exercise was ruined because of that, my fights happen because of that. Slow improvement should help. But it feels too slow.

It feels like a disservice to myself if I give in to Aausi. I don't mean to paint her in a bad light but I really feel bad hearing her talk about hisham. It hurt the most when she said she wanted to do everything and leave it with those 5 days in Russia. I feel pathetic. I gave her my all... I guess I'm not a confident / stable person. But... I have always done my best.

Aausi just tested me, and I told her everything.

But how shall I know that when it is too far gone?

one of things I have also realised within this past vacation is that I need to be able to express my emotions so that I don't bottle anything up. She isn't going to reply. She's just opened her laptop... I know why, too. I'm sure she has much stuff to deal with... which is why she just wants to focus on work instead. I should work ~~on~~ on myself.

I was thinking today whether or not to join a gym. I might have some problems with time management. I might have ran out of things to present. Or, say. lol.

I messed up another drawing. Tried to draw sandeep. failed miserably.

Reached class late. Thankfully it is Saturday today. Was at aamshi's place last night. Didn't do any work we just did the deed. Kinda feel bad about not working. Today morning she said that I am hers and only hers. I was reminded of what happened in Russia. I did not say anything because I did not want to spoil the mood but... it still weighs on my mind. It still feels unfair. Moreover I'm worried about our assignments and how we both would complete our assignments. Life is harsh, man. She just gets angry at me regardless of what has happened. It gets tiring. Expression isn't good either, it never helps. Me telling her that I shared with her the fact postabade hojayege paani sokh uga... meaning "पता" gaege, isn't responded well to either. And then the tone with which she talks to me. I'm the problem. I should just die.

Prices are upper middle class.
They have a really old school and desi approach,

Q Is there a way to do research at a distance?
All his research is done in person I think...

The story of how he made sub-brand! A lot of which started with how products should be!

You'll never just be a logo designer, you'll end up being whatever you want if you want to grow!

→ You need 5 elements in a brand, for it to be felt - ethos : The feeling of the brand. Identify, express and then communicate.

Agar ethos nahi hai, to brand nahi hai.
Ethos is a belief system. Beliefs & values.

Perception : Collect, correct, express, communicate.
Behaviours, spirit, process, stories.
You cannot build a brand without perception. Sometimes history is not there, you have to build history.

Promise :

Brand Process :

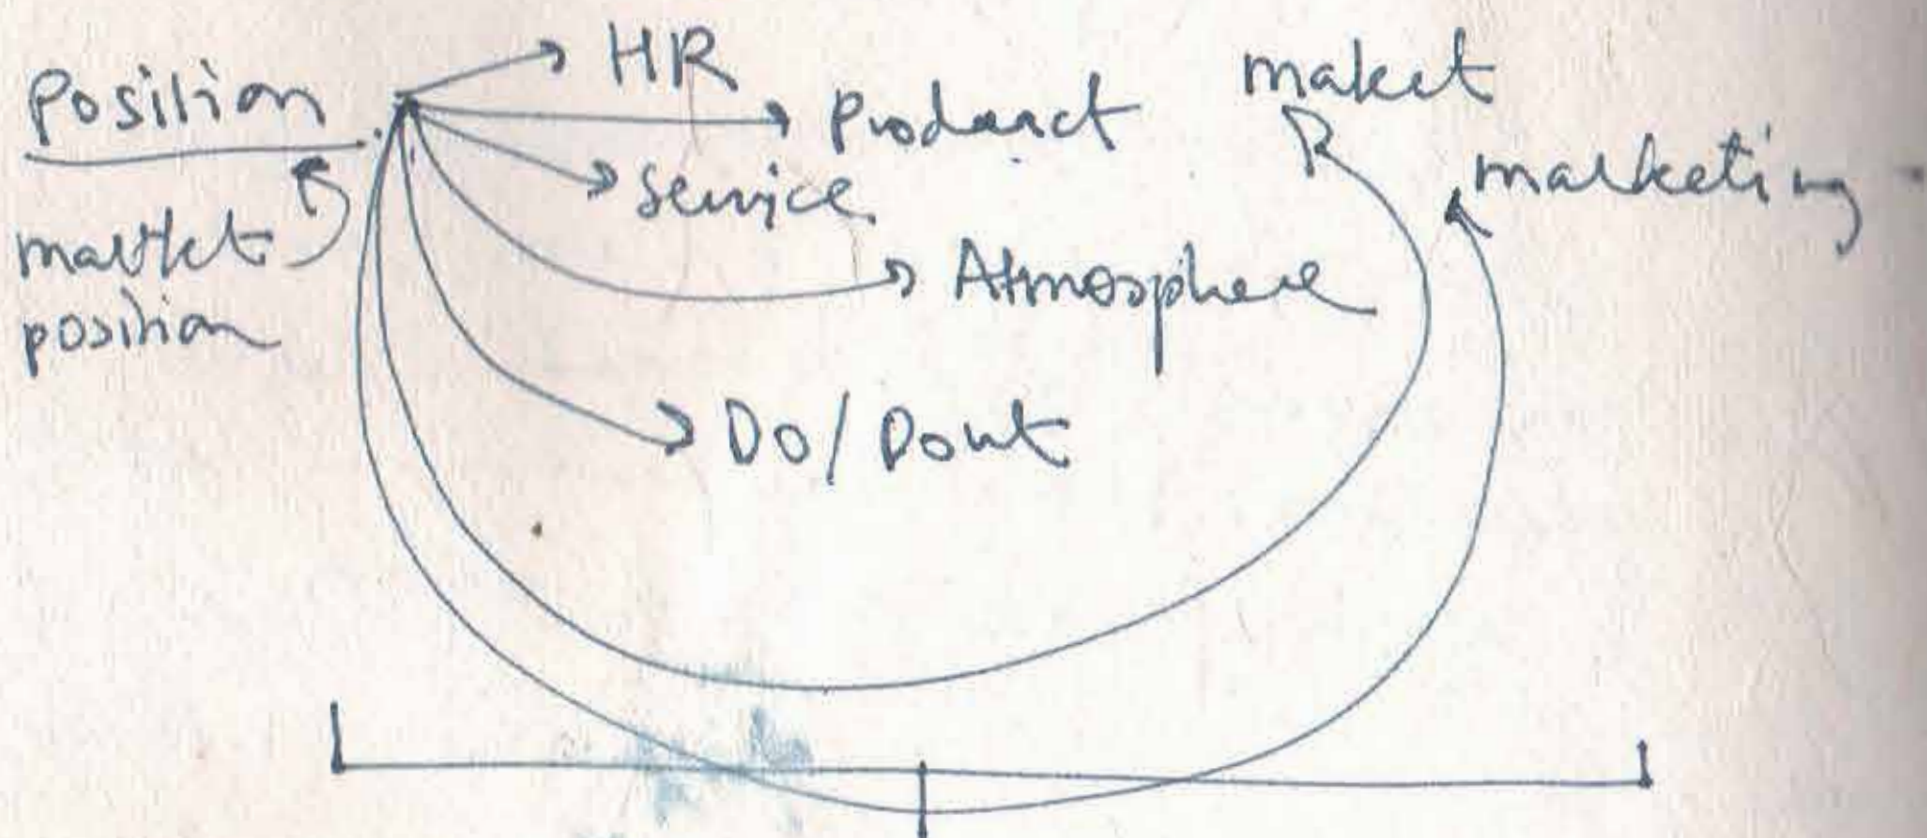

Research revolves around context.

Articulate → ~~evaluate~~ Design → Evaluate.

“Design will be replaced by AI if we don't add more content”.

This is not a ~~real process~~ linear process.

for many companies, articulation is a strategy. Articulation is the most important part of the logo. It tells us all about:

All of this leads to the Design Phase.

① Research → ② Articulate → ③ Design → ④ Evaluate.

mostly consultant companies do this.

This is where most value lies.

Branding aims to:

- create differentiation. The cattle "mohar" is the origin of branding
- create recognition.

Brand is creating that very clear perception". - Sudhir Sharma, Indi Design.

- create insight / expectation. The moment expectations about a brand are clear, you have yourself a brand. After a brand is built, users have the final say about what the brand should be.
- create delight.

Finally brand creates impact & engagement.

A good brand gives you:

Clarity → Consistency → Leadership.

Brand life: Create → Manage → Evaluate & somehow,

All of this amounts to: either positive or negative.

once you have an experience,
you have a brand.

experience

"once a brand is built,
you cannot change it".

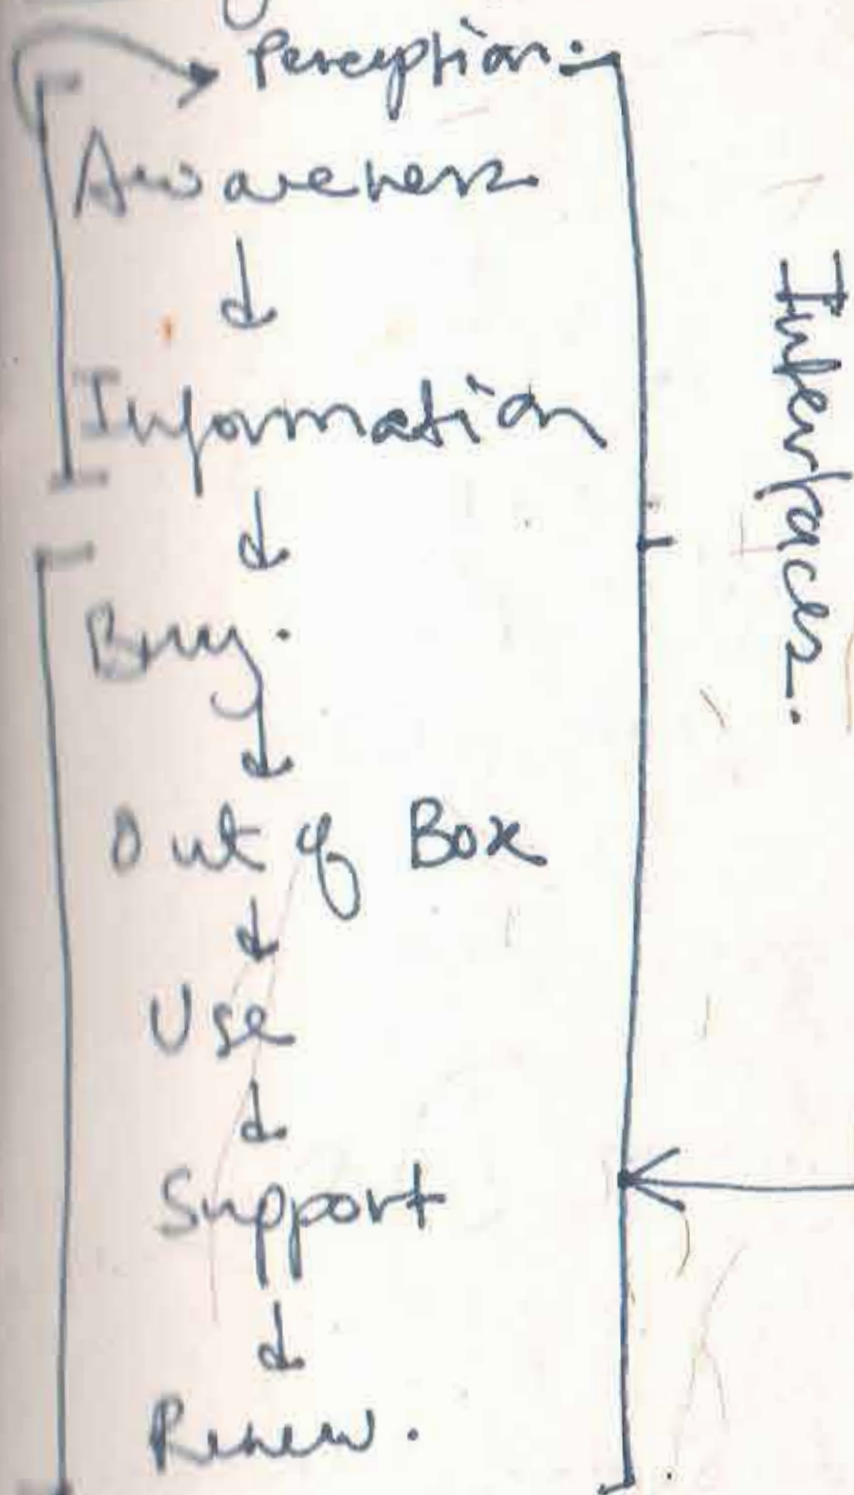

- Sudhir Indi

Advertising creates an illusion of an experience.
Brands may not live up to that illusion.

If there is no experience. $\rightarrow$ no brand.

Brand & Branding always works for the people who have no experience with the brand.

Lifecycle of a Product / Service:

Each interface where we interact with the product & its advertisements, have to be consciously designed.

Many times we only do part of the Branding.

Through this, a story keeps running parallelly.

Indian brands, create at the perception, and then the experience keeps falling.

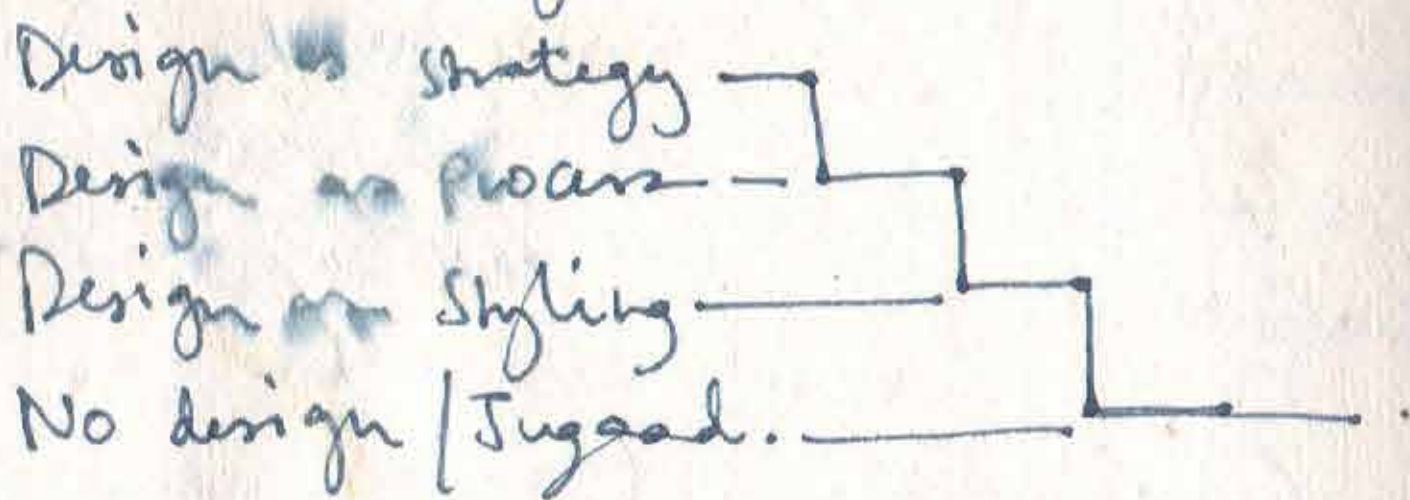

This is experience.

If the perception & experience of the brand matches its a great product.

Positioning → Interfaces → Perception → mission

Good Brand & good business are synonymous.

"Design Ladder" Copenhagen Institute put this together

The higher you go up the ladder, more money there is.

Creativity is just like magic.
